The Wiltshire Music Centre Trust
is a registered charity (number 1026160)

Wiltshire Music Centre is a registered charity with an enviable reputation for the outstanding quality of its concert performances across classical, folk, jazz and world music. With an annual programme of 90 concerts, our strong audience following now exceeds 21,000. We are delighted to have presented the work of 250 living composers and more than 20 world premieres. Our sell-out concerts include world-renowned guitarist John Williams, violinist Nicola Benedetti, who opened the BBC Proms, and jazz legend Courtney Pine.

Our purpose-built 300-seat concert hall, with unrestricted views, is host to international performers such as pianist Imogen Cooper, jazz singer Stacey Kent and the Orchestra of the Age of Enlightenment. We are also a permanent home to a range of orchestras, choirs and other music groups.

Since opening, we have worked with hundreds of schools in Wiltshire and Swindon. Our education programme reaches 22,000 children and young people each year, from those new to music to highly gifted young musicians. Projects include a pioneering music club, Zone Club, for learning disabled people, multi-cultural events for people from black and other minority ethnic communities, and work with children in isolated rural primary schools.
